Iraq reports Iranian shelling

BAGHDAD (Agencies) — Iraq said Saturday that Iranian artillery shelled its southern city of Basra, killing one civilian, wounding 10 and damaging several houses and shops. It was the second time in five days that Baghdad had accused Iran of breaking an unofficial halt on attacks on residential areas in the six-and-a-half-year-long war. Saturday's high command communique also said Iraqi helicanter gunships flew 63 combat missions against Iranian positions, indicting heavy losses in men and equipment. In another development, manifestical Iranian dissidents have brilled or mounded accused to a mental day of the processor. killed or wounded scores of revolutionary guards in an ambush in western Iran in an escalating campaign against Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's regime, an opposition group claimed Friday. The Mujahedeen-e-Khalq said in a statement that the clash took place Thursday as Tehran said its forces had launched a sweep against guerrilla bases near the Iraqi border. There was no independent confirmation of the Mujahedeen report. But the Tehran government has acknowledged intensified guerrilla attacks by announcing mass roundups of dissidents and their sympathisers and operations against guerrilla sanctuaries in recent weeks.

Reagan hoping for arms accord

SANTA BARBARA (AP) — President Ronald Reagan said Saturday he was encouraged by Soviet willingness to "clear away the roadblocks" holding up agreement on a nuclear arms control treaty. But Mr. Reagan cautioned that an arms control agreement is not imminent, saying, "we must look at this issue in a calm, careful and deliberate manner." In his weekly radio address, broadcast from his mountaintop ranch in southern California, Mr. Reagan reviewed the highlights of Secretary of State George Shultz's talks in Moscow last week. Mr. Reagan said the United States and the Soviet Union were closer to agreement on a pact to rid Europe of Soviet and U.S. intermediate-range missiles. And he said that in the Moscow talks, both sides agreed to the principle of on-site verification to enforce such a pact. The president said he would meet this week in Washington with Republican and opposition Democratic leaders of Congress to explain the most recent developments in the arms control arena. He repeated that the United States would be consult extensively with its NATO allies.

PSD explains bridge closures

AMMAN (Petra) — The King Hussein and Prince Mohammad bridges across the River Jordan will be partially closed on Sunday and completely closed on Monday, according to a statement by the Public Security Department (PSD). The statement said that the King Hussein Bridge would be closed Sunday, after 300 travellers crossed, and the Prince Mohammad Bridge would be closed after admitting 250 passengers, regardless of the time when statement said that only those who urgently need to cross should Sgo to the bridges on Sunday, and added that both bridges would be closed on Monday and no travellers would be allowed to cross until Tuesday morning.

Egyptian population exceeds 50 million

CAIRO (AP) — Egypt's population increased by 2.8 per cent annually during the last decade and now stands at almost 50.5 million, a senior official said Saturday. Mukhtar Hallouda, director of the government's central mobilisation and statistics authority, said a November 1986 census counted 50.455 million Egyptians, including about 2.25 million working or living abroad. A census taken in 1976 showed Egyptians numbered 38 million.

Oadhafi intervening to free jailed Briton

LONDON (AP) — Colonel Muammar Qadhafi has intervened for the release of a British engineer jailed in Tripoli since November 1982, the official Li-byan news agency (JANA) reported Saturday. However, a British Foreign Office spokesman said Robert Maxwell, a 38-yearold Scotsman serving a 12-year sentence for bribery and industrial espionage, had not been freed "as far as we know." Ron Brown, a left-wing British lawmaker who returned to London earlier Saturday after talks with Col. Qadhafi, said he was "quietly hopeful" that Libyan authorities would release Mr. Maxwell. JANA, said Col. Qadhafi's move to release Mr. Maxwell was a result of the initiative of Mr. Brown and his parliamentary colleagues "and also out of consideration for the masses of the British people who have ... (condemned) the savage and barbaric aggression carried out by the U.S. administration against the Libyan Arab people."

Death toll rises to 14

By a Jordan Times Staff Writer

AMMAN — The death toll in a bus accident on Friday in the Mujib area north of Karak rose to 14 on Saturday, and three of the 15 injured were reported in critical condition in

According to a statement issued late Friday night by the Public Security Department (PSD), 12 people, most of them schoolchildren, died on the spot after the accident, which occurred late Friday evening.

The bus was carrying 29 passengers — teachers and students from the Dhiban Secondary School on a week-end trip to Aqaba, according to the PSD statement. The statement said the accident occurred when the driver of the vehicle lost control while negotiating a bend and the bus went off course near a steep slop and tumbled down to a 400metre-deep valley.

The PSD said rescue operations lasted for over four hours and involved army helicopters which rushed the victims to hospitals - the King Hussein Medical Centre in Amman, the Karak Government Hospital and the Prince Ali Hospital of the Armed Forces near Karak.

Lieutenant Abdullah Kafawin. director of the Civil Defence Department in Karak, said the rescue operations were delayed be-cause of difficulties in reaching the crashed vehicle in the bottom of the valley in darkness.

Dr. Atef Al Jaarafeh, director of the Karak hospital, said all staff of the hospital were alerted and all leaves were cancelled so that all possible attention could be given to the injured. He said three of the injured were still in serious condition Saturday.

Hospital sources said two of the injured died Saturday, raising the death toll to 14.

Among the dead were the driver and Shafiq Raddad Al Qitamin, headmaster of the Dhiban Secondary School, and two of his children. Most of the students who died were in the age range of 16 and 19 years.

His Royal Highness Crown Prince Hassan, the Regent, delegated Education Minister Thouqan Al Hindawi to convey his condolences to the families of the dead and assigned Karak Gov-ernor Salem Al Qudah to visit the injured in hospital and inquire after their conditions and wish them speedy recovery.

Health Minister Zaid Hamzeh contacted the King Hussein Medical centre and the two other hospitals to inquire about the conditions of the injured.

PLO seeks last-minute formula over ties with Egypt as countdown starts for PNC

By Lamis K. Andoni ifi Algiers

LEADERS of major Palestinian factions were engaged in urgent last-minute efforts to find a compromise formula governing the PLO's relations with Egypt as the countdown started on Saturday for the scheduled opening of the Palestine National Council (PNC) on Monday.

At the same time, differences over relations with Egypt have not prevented the factions from reaching a draft political agreement to be submitted to the PNC. Informed Palestinian sources said the draft agreement explicitly rejected American preconditions for the PLO to join the "Middle East peace process" but endorsing the idea of an international conference on the Middle East under U.N. auspices.

erupted between Arab resistance forces and Israeli soldiers in South Lebanon on Saturday, with the two sides giving widely differ-ing accounts of the fighting and the casualties.

A statement from "Islamic Resistance," a coalition of Lebanese and Palestinian fighters, said at least 30 Israelis were killed in what it described as a ferocious battle.

An Israeli army spokesman in Tel Aviv said 18 guerrillas were killed and four Israeli soldiers were wounded in fighting near Kantara village in the eastern sector of Israel's self-declared

'security zone." Members of the pro-Iranian Hizbollah (Party of God) attacked positions held by the Israelibacked South Lebanon Army (SLA) militia before dawn and Israelis moved in to help to repulse the assault, the spokesman

In Beirut, local radios quoted the Islamic Resistance statement as saying "between 30 and 40 Jews were killed" in the fighting. "This is one of the largest attacks staged against Israeli forces in South Lebanon," a Hizboilah spokesman told Reuters. "At least 200 of our guerrillas joined the attack."

In an earlier statement, Islamic Resistance said its fighters infiltrated into the "security zone" and attacked Israelis at the hillton village of Tallat Alman, about 10 kilometres west of the Israeli

The Islamic Resistance is the gnerrilla arm of Hizbollah, which is made up of Shi'ite zealots loyal to Iran's Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

The regional police command in South Lebanon said Saturday in a statement that one person was killed and five people were wouncas when the Marjayoun region came under a sudden rocket barrage early morning. It did not elaborate.

Sources told AP Israeli helicopter gunships were chasing the guerrillas across the mountain range overlooking the strategic Litani River basin at the "security zone's" northern flank.

One source, speaking to AP on condition of anonymity, said "most of the group which tried to attack Marjayoun is still besieged in the region." He refused to elaborate.

Israel established the "security zone" in 1985 after the withdrawal of its occupation army from South Lebanon.

The strip, 12 kilometres north of Israel's border and stretching from the Mediterranean in the west to the footbills of Mount Hermon in the east, is patrolled by the SLA militia. Israel maintains troops in the zone to provide support for the militia.

Israelis

OCCUPIED JERUSALEM (Agencies) — The Israeli army on Saturday imposed a curfew on the Balata Palestinian refugee camp, the largest in the occupied territories

An Israeli spokesman said the curfew, effective until after sunset, was imposed because of "disturbances" in the camp Saturday morning. Palestinian sources contacted by telephone told Reuters they were unaware of any disturbances and saw no reason for the curfew.

The clampdown follows a week of protests in the West Bank and Gaza Strip.

Last Saturday, an Israeli woman from a Jewish settlement in the West Bank was killed and five others were critically burned when a petrol bomb was thrown at their car.

Following the attack, Jewish settlers rampaged through the nearby town of Kalkilya setting fire to Arab-owned cars and orchards.

On Monday, a Palestinian student was shot dead and four others were wounded when Israeli troops opened fire on demonstrators at Birzeit University, near Ramallah. Later in the week, two Israeli women and a soldier were injured in stone-throwing attacks in the West Bank and Gaza.

Israeli Defence Minister Yitzhak Rabin has vowed to crack down on Palestinian protests and warned Palestinian nationalists that violence will lessen chances of a "more liberal" Israeli policy towards the occupied territories.

ROME (Agencies) — Italy's new cabinet ministers took the oath of office on Saturday, establishing the nation's 46th government since the end of World War II. It was expected to fail a confidence vote later this week.

Sixteen Christian Democrats and nine "technocrats" with no formal party allegiance were sworn in by President Francesco Cossiga during a ceremony in the Quirinal Palace.

The new government will be presented to parliament on Monday for a confidence vote.

But the Christian Democrats, while long-dominant in Italy's Byzan'i te politics, are a minority party, and the cabinet was expected to fail the test, setting the stage for parliamentary elections, possibly in June, a year ahead of

Middle East.

Mr. Cossiga would dissolve parliament, call early general elections and ask the current government to stay on in a caretaker role through the polls. Prime Minister Amintore Fan-fani, a Christian Democrat, announced the members of his cabinet on Friday night, shortly after Socialist leader Bettino Craxi bitterly attacked the new government. Mr. Craxi had led Italy's longest-lived post-war government.

All 16 Christian Democrat ministers were in Mr. Craxi's cabinet and retained their posts, except Remo Gaspari, who switched from public administration to defence, replacing Republican Giovanni Spadolini.

Hamzeh: Jordan is free

AMMAN (Petra) — Jordan is free of AIDS (acquired immune deficiency syndrome) but has four carriers of the disease who should not be considered as infected. Health Minister Zaid Hamzeh announced Saturday.

Dr. Hamzeh said that the source of the disease had been identified as coming through the transfusion of blood imported from abroad for use for a certain number of cases, but the Health Ministry was imposing strict control over the situation and was closely watching the condition of the four AIDS carriers.

The minister was addressing the opening session of a training course on epidemiology. The course is organised in cooperation with the World Health Organisation (WHO).

The Ministry of Health stopped importing blood from other countries a long time ago and is relying on local blood donations and will most certainly inform the WHO of any AIDS case that might occur in the Kingdom, the minister said.

The minister said preventive measures against AIDS were discussed by the Arab Health Ministers Council in Khartoum last month and a special committee had been set up to discuss complications related to the disease and means of protecting the public against it.

The Health Ministry, through national inoculation programmes, has been able to combat childhood diseases, and also continues to fight contagious diseases, Dr. Hamzeh said.

Dr. Suleiman Qub'lan, director of the primary health care at the Ministry of Health, addressed the meeting, underlining the importance of research into methods and means of combating contagious diseases.

WHO expert Dr. Mohammad Taqi Jaafar also spoke at the meeting. He referred to a number of obstacles that impede research into means of combating contagious diseases. Twenty-two doctors from the Health Ministry are taking part in the training course.

Wright sees best chance for arms accord in 50 years

MOSCOW (Agencies) - U.S. House of Representatives Speaker Jim Wright, leading a congressional delegation visiting Moscow, said Saturday the superpowers had the best chance in half a century to reach an arms control agreement.

"This moment in history presents to us a better opportunity than we have seen in the past 50 years to achieve a constructive agreement that is mutual and verifiable and will be to the advantage of both our countries," said Wright, a Democrat. "There is a sincere desire that we detect on the part of the Soviet people for peace," Mr. Wright told a news conference. The legislators spent four days in Moscow, meeting with Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev and other officials.

Mr. Wright said the delegation, which arrived in the Soviet Union last Monday, held very frank discussions which revealed differences of opinion, particularly on human rights, but suggested Moscow sincerely wanted peace.

In another development, the Soviet Union accepted a U.S. proposal to conduct underground nuclear weapons tests on each other's territories to guard against violations of two unratified treaties, U.S. arms control negotiator Kenneth L. Adelman said Friday.

"It's a very positive move," Mr. Adelman said. "We've wanted better verification for six years and they have said yes." Mr. Adelman said the two sides would have to decide how to monitor the tests. The United States prefers testing that in-volves lowering modern technological devices into the blast area. The devices would measure whether the detonation is within the 150-kiloton limit required by the 1974 threshold test ban treaty

In a separate development congressional committees investigating the Iran-contra affair are expected to vote next week to grant limited immunity from prosecution to former National Security Adviser John Poindexter, sources say.

The immunity vote is expected Wednesday. Immunity would be granted under an agreement with special prosecutor Lawrence Walsh that would keep Adm. Poindexter's congressional testimony secret until June 15.

Adm. Poindexter, a navy rear admiral, resigned his White House post on Nov. 25 after III said profits from secret arms sales to Iran had been diverted cladestinely to aid Nicaragua's contra rebels. He is regarded as the key witness on the question of Mr. Reagan's knowledge of the funds diversion.

Mr. Reagan has denied knowing about the diversion of money, and Adm. Poindexter will be asked whether he briefed the downgrading of ties.
Mr. Carter said after the meeting that Mr. Assad had assured him that Syria would do everypresident, possibly on May 15, 1986, about the contents of a memorandum from his aide. Col. North, that discussed diverting freedom of Western hostages, in-cluding eight Americans, held in $12 million in arms payments to the contra rebels.

Foreign medics share misery of Beirut camp siege

By Hala Jaber

BEIRUT — They called it 'bloody Friday," the day when Dutch nurse Ben Alofs amoutated both legs off seven Palestinian guerrillas wounded by a mortar bomb at Beirut's besieged Bourj Al Barajneh refugee camp.

"The operating theatre looked like a slaughterhouse, blood everywhere," said Alofs. Outside the hospital kitchen on that Feb. 13, he recalled, some of the camp's 12,000 residents were begging for food.

Alofs, 34, spoke as he, British surgeon Pauline Cutting and Scottish nurse Susan Wighton packed their suitcases at the weekend, ready to go home after a Syrian troop deployment ended the 5½ month blockade by the Shi'ite Muslim Amal militia.

"I still wonder whether it really is over with me still alive," said Wighton, a 27-year-old from

The three were part of a Palestinian crescent team that ran the "Haifa" Hospital and a small clinic 100 metres away in the centre of the settlement, much of which has been shelled, sniped and machinegumed to ruins.

Cutting said 135 people were killed in Bourj Al Barajneh and more than 800 wounded during the siege.

a day from the hospital generator, Wighton said she sometimes sneaked up to the hospital roof to gaze at the lights of Beirut all around.

"Then a sniper's bullet would hit the wall and I would run back to my room as fast as I could,"

'Lebanon is a strange country. You love it and hate it ... And you always want to come back."

Alofs was in Lebanon at the time of the 1982 massacre of Palestinians in nearby Sabra and Shatila camps and lived through all five heavy bouts of camps war fighting since 1985. To a certain extent you get used to the bombs and explosions and develop some kind of toughness to death and injuries, but this round was nerve-shattering," he said.

Cutting, 34, said she came to the camp in December 1985 in response to an advertisement and because she felt her work would be valuable in a place where most people did not have access to proper treatment. There is some element of refusing to give up and go away. The worse it gets the more valuable your help becomes," she said. She lost six kilos (14 pounds) during the siege.

AMMAN (Petra) — Dr. Ahmad Abu Qoura, president of the International Red Cross (IRC) Standing Commission and Chairman of the Jordan National Red Crescent Society (JNRCS) Saturday left for Monte Carlo to take part in the meetings of the legal medical committee which will be held there on Wednesday. During its three-day meetings, the committee will discuss international humanitarian law and means of enforcing it. Dr. Abu Qoura is a member of the committee which is chaired by Crown Prince Rainier of Monaco.

Public help security forces recapture fugitive from law

Security Department (PSD) has apprehended an outlaw who escaped from an Islamic (Shari'a) court in Amman last week while giving testimony. The fugitive from law, Mohammad Tawfiq Abdul Rahman Abu Al Asha'er, 42, was being tried for acquiring narcotics and issuing cheques without funds to honour them.

Last week the PSD issued announcements in the local papers and media urging the outlaw to surrender and the department. ing the country and its citizens.

AMMAN (J.T.) — The Public called on citizens to assist the security forces by providing any information about the fugitive. Information about the outlaw was given to the PSD by Sameer Omar Abu Baker and Sameer. Mohammad Muhawesh and their assistance helped the department arrest the outlaw within two days of his escape. The PSD expressed thanks to the two citizens for their help and cooperation and said public support helps the department in its task of safeguard-

In reply to a question, Dr. Montgomery said that Electro-Convulsive-Therapy (ECT) is a good treatment and somewhat superior to the anti-depression. It has the advantage of working in patients with severe depression

drugs. The disadvantages of ECT in terms of memory disturbance are present but not as serious as originally thought. There is an indicator that in six months there is no difference, he said. But he

Specialist discusses new approaches in treatment of clinical depression

By Salwa El Taher Special to the Jordan Times

AMMAN — The Third Pan-Arab Congress on Psychiatry focused its discussions on the latest developments in mental health with contributions from leading doctors around the world. Among the guest lecturers was Dr. Stuart Montgomery from the Academic Department of Psychiatry, Saint Mary's Hospital, London who presented a lecture on "Recent Advances in the treatment of

In an interview with the Jordan Times Dr. Montgomery said that today there is a greater recognition of depression as in the past, people sought help less readily. "Also, we as doctors were much more inclined to look at the anxiety that was part of the depression and to misdiagnose it as an anxiety state," he said.

He explained that many patients regard the diagnosis of depression as being a sentence which they do not want to have, adding that he believes there is a cultural belief that being anxious is normal so therefore you do not have a psychiatric diagnosis.

Dr. Montgomery said that the stigma against psychiatric illness is still very strong and that this could be overcome if doctors persuade people that depression is a responsive disorder in that it responds to treatment. "We have anti-depressants now that seem to work well in a relatively short period of time. We should not forget that fatality associated with depression is quite high as we have deaths from overdosage (suicide) then there are the accidents, the heart-attacks, and the increased death from the various physical illness that occur while people are depressed," Dr. Montgomery noted.

He went on to say that the suicide rate is lower in Muslim countries because of the strong protective effect of religion noting that in England, the strong Catholic communities have less reported cases of suicide.

Commenting on the relationship between the social, political and economic environment and depression, he said that there is good evidence that if people are subjected to adverse experiences, they likely to suffer depression if they are prone to it. But depression tends to have a relatively constant distribution, and it could be that it is simply more visible and obvious under stress, he continued.

Engineers to discuss Arab construction. building code

AMMAN (Petra) - The Second Construction Engineering Conference opens at the University of Jordan today under the patronage of His Royal Highness Crown Prince Hassan, the Regent. Delegations from various Arab countries, the private and public sectors in Jordan will attend the conference which is to discuss a host of questions of concern to the construction business in the Arab World, according to Dr. Samih Qaqish, the conference's secretary general.

He said that the four-day con-ference will offer the delegations a good opportunity to exchange expertise, will boost the role of the university in serving the local community and underline the role of Arab engineers in this respect. The conference aims at orienting engineers on modern techniques in construction, their applications and effects on national economies, Dr. Qaqish continued.

Referring to subjects on the agenda, Dr. Qaqish said that the delegates will discuss designs for buildings and the effects of earthquakes, the proposed pan-Arab building code and various methods used in strengthening existing installations and build-

Education Ministry announces dates of school examinations

AMMAN (Petra) — The Ministry of Education Saturday announced the date of school examinations during the coming two months and at the end of the second term of the 1986-1987 scholastic year.

Mr. Odeh Najdawi, assistant director of examinations at the Ministry of Education, said that students of the third secondary and third preparatory classes will sit for their school examinations on May 18 and finish by May 24 and that other classes will take their school examinations from June 1 until June 9, 1987.

Mr. Najdawi said that students of the third secondary class and those of the third preparatory class will take their tawjihi and secondary admission examinations respectively from June 14. He added that Arabic and English typing and practical examinations in the vocational stream will start on June 21.

Dentists stress importance of primary dental care in schools

AMMAN (J.T.) — The Sixth Jordanian Dental Conference which concluded its sessions in Amman on Friday has issued recommendations calling for greater attention to preventive dental medicine and more primary care for schoolchildren through the periodical checking of teeth and educational prog-

The conference urged the Health Ministry to re-consider a system underwhich a general examination is given to newlygraduated dentists and suggested the appointment of teams to conduct the examination in coopera-tion with the Jordanian Dental Association (JDA).

The conference also recommended that proper examinations be conducted on the levels of fluoride in Jordan's water. Participants also urged the govern-ment to hold contacts with Arab countries to offer specialised scholarships in dental surgery to dentist of the occupied West Bank in view of the great need for several specialisations in the occupied territory.

The conference, which opened on Thursday, discussed 48 working papers and was attended by approximately 300 Jordanian and 150 non-Jordanian Arab dentists.

AMMAN - Cultural and educational exchanges between Jordan and West Germany are off to a flying start with what was described as a highly successful visit to the Kingdom by a group of students from the Federal Republic of Germany.

"We found the Jordanians extremely friendly, helpful and hos-pitable," said Thomas Gose-wisch, member of a 13-student group which arrived here two weeks ago on the first student exchange programme between Jordan and West Germany. With the exception of the differences in the cultural backgrounds of our countries, we found very little else separating us," he said. The group arrived here on April

The views Thomas has formed from his stay with a Jordanian host family are similar to the impressions gathered by the rest of his colleagues aged between 13

Despite the cultural differences, Thomas believes he can acquaint himself with the "Jordanian social habits and the traditions of a closely knit and religious society" if he was to live in the Kingdom.

"We are all delighted to learn about your traditions and social norms," Thomas continued. The scheme is the first such activity organised by the Jordanian-West German Friendship Society, set up to strengthen cultural ties between the two countries.

However, he remarked that the programme was "too big" in that it included lots of activities, visits and meetings with various people.

The group toured most of the country's touristic sites and archaeological places. Among their planned activities was an overnight stay at the permanent scout camp in Ajloun and a meeting with some of the Baqa'a refugee camp children.

Apart from a busy schedule of visits, they spent some time with their counterparts at the Ra'id Al Arabi School.

The students said that living with their Jordanian host families gave them the most interesting insight into the daily life of Jordanian family, and allowed them to experience the country's values, social traditions and norms.

Judging from this experience, the West German side was very enthusiastic about extending the duration of the programme in the future. "It might become a oneyear exchange activity," said Mr. Vassel. Working team completes national plan to regulate use of land

By Mamdouh Hawamdeh Special to the Jordan Times

AMMAN — A working team has just completed a comprehensive national plan to regulate the use of lands in the Kingdom upon the directives of His Royal Highness Crown Prince Hassan, the Regent. The plan is aimed at directing and organising the location of social and economic development projects in the country.

The working team has drawn up three papers on the use of land and its capabilities. The first paper was compiled by the Ministry of Rural and Municipal Affairs and the Environment; the second paper by the Ministry of Planning and the third by the Royal Jordanian Geographic Centre which recommended the following:

— A comprehensive survey of all information related to the use of

- The establishment of policies to regulate the use of lands and making proposals on the method of carrying out these policies.

- Initiating a plan for the use of land in Irbid in the light of previous studies in the area and within the framework of a comprehensive national plan for the use of land.

- A study of the problems faced future consideration in planning, drawing on experiences of the Greater Amman area.

- The use of local expertise as a base for achieving the project in cooperation with the Royal Jordanian Geographic Centre. - The establishment of a management system for the implementation of the project.

- Setting a timetable for the finalisation of the project.

- The Royal Jordanian Geographic Centre is to coordinate work with the concerned ministries and authorities in the

Hamzeh, CDD director meet British official

AMMAN (Petra) — Health Minister Zaid Hamzeh Saturday received the director of first aid in London T.R. Walton who arrived here on Friday on a several-day visit to Jordan. During the meeting, which was attended by Civil Defence Department (CDD) Director Lieutenant General Khaled Al Tarawneh and other officials, the two sides discussed cooperation between Jordan and Britain in the fields of first aid and civil defence and the possibility of Jordan benefitting from British experience. Mr. Walton expressed the readiness of British authorities to cooperate with the concerned departments in the Kingdom and to exchange experiences, especially in first aid.

Later Saturday Lt.-Gen. Tarawneh received Mr. Walton to discuss means of further developing and upgrading joint training programmes between Jordan and Britain. The CDD director pointed out that his department has decided to upgrade and modernise its first and emergency aid services by providing them with the latest technology and equipment.

A number of CDD officers and personnel have recently been sent on training courses to the London first aid department and senior first aid specialists from London were sent to Jordan on training

The human element and accidents

THE TRAGIC death of 14 people, mostly schoolchildren, during a weekend school outing comes as a shock to the Jordanian people. The loss of this number of children in a single day raises a number of questions in the mind of many Jordanians about transport safety measures in the Kingdom, the attitude and the skill of drivers of public vehicles and the condition of the roads, all of which no doubt contributed their share to the Friday accident and the similar ones that happened most recently in other regions of the country.

The Public Security Department (PSD), the Jordan Society for the Prevention of Road Accidents (JSPRA) and other organisations and government departments have been continually involved in activities, mostly awareness programmes, designed to reduce the number of road accidents; and it was in May 1986 that a symposium on road safety issued recommendations on means of cutting down on accidents and saving the country from further tragedies. The recommendations called for introducing traffic awareness programmes at schools, launching campaigns for orienting members of the public on road dangers, examining the condition of roads with proper care to be given to dangerous areas, and controlling road construction operations as well as re-introducing regulations on safety belts and issuing new legislations for stricter court sentences against violators of traffic laws.

Unfortunately, little attention appears to have been given to these recommendations over the past year, with the result that more tragic events occurred this year, noticeably involving school buses with more loss of life. Upon re-introducing the seatbelt measure on Feb. 1. 1987 the PSD cited figures that clearly showed a drop in road accidents during 1986 in comparison with the previous year. Official statistics showed that 1986 witnessed a 31 per cent drop in the number of deaths, registering only 362 and the injured 7,538 - 17 per cent less than the 1985 figures. Of course, we were glad to see the drop in accidents and booed that conditions would improve and that drivers had become more careful and rational in dealing with motor vehicles on the road.

The JSPRA's recommendations clearly indicated that it was the human element that that had proved to be the most direct cause for many of the accidents on our roads and that proper training should be provided to drivers of public vehicles. There can be no meaning at all for such recommendations unless they are heeded and translated into practice and there can never be safety on the roads unless all concerned parties show and practice real cooperation in order to make the roads a safer place for all.

Al Ra'i: Israeli repression mounts

THE Israeli authorities in the occupied Arab territories have decided to build cement walls around Palestinian refugee camps in order to tighten a siege around them and help repress any resistance activity. These walls are also intended to protect Israeli troops and Jewish settlers from the wrath of the Arab inhabitants who continue the struggle against the Israeli presence in Arab land. The Israelis seem to have copied this system from the racist regime of South Africa which has already built walls and set up barbed wire around the black townships to stem any resistance and to stifle the indigenous population's activities. This is of course a manifestation of hatred lowards the inhabitants who in Palestine and in South Africa are struggling for their freedom and do not accept capitulation. The Arabs have been exposed to Israel's campaigns of eviction and arrests and also detention and had their homes demolished and their crops and trees burnt but they are still determined to carry on the struggle and the resistance in order to thwart enemy plans for perpetuating Israeli occupation of Arab land. The Arab inhabitants will no doubt continue to make it difficult for the Israeli invaders to have rest or live in peace as long as the Israelis occupy Arab territory and deny the Arabs their rights and their homes.

Al Dustour: Efforts to end Gulf war

AN Arab seven-member committee is shortly visiting countries that hold permanent membership in the U.N. Security Council in order to discuss and find a means for ending the Gulf war on the basis of the council's resolution number 582. The seven-member committee has already visited Paris and met with President François Mitterrand and will proceed to the other countries later on. The council's resolution was issued 14 months ago, urging both sides to cease fire and pull their forces to the internationally recognised border and to exchange prisoners of war. This resolution had been welcomed not by Iraq only but also by all the Arab countries which moved to form the seven-member committee to follow up the implementation of the resolution. Iran has so far rejected the resolution and went ahead with plans to launch one offensive after another on Iraqi territory with disregard to the will and the view of the international community. But this does not absolve the United Nations from the responsibility of working to end this war which of late has witnessed alarming escalation. One of the council members, France, has voiced support for any efforts aimed at ending the conflict and we hope that the other major nations and the international community at large will follow suit and help work out a formula that can secure an end to the conflict in the Gulf area.

Sawt Al Shaab: Calling for a summit

IT seems that the Arabs are in need of a summit meeting which could, not only help find solutions for chronic Arab problems, but also unify Arab countries' position with regard to the international Middle East peace conference. An Arab summit meeting is needed so that the Arab leaders can agree on common ground for future action to thwart Israel's plans in our occupied Arab territory and its efforts to undermine peace which the Arabs seek to achieve. At a summit the Arab leaders can agree on means of ending their differences and unifying their positions and also work out a formula for future action as long as their objectives are the same and as long as they seek what is best for their nation. For this reason an Arab summit can be described as a guarantee for the future action that would be taken either on the domestic front or in dealings with the Israeli enemy. This summit meeting should be paved for through side meetings and through intensive talks that are necessary to ensure a successful summit.

When national economy is seen through stock exchange

Dr. Hashem Sabbagh, Director General of the Amman Stock Market made a speech at the International Affairs Council last week. Those who attended the lecture and listened to Dr. Sabbagh's unreserved tone may have come to believe that the fate of the Jordanian economy depends on the volume of shares that change hands and on the level of prices that fluctuate daily at the whim of speculators who exchange profits and losses.

The director general of the Amman financial market overwhelmed his audience by figures on shares and bonds circulated every year. He, of course, knows that the volume of bonds in itself is meaningless unless we know how the proceeds were used and for what purpose. It is one thing if the bonds were used to fund deficit, and another if they were used to finance real productive capabili-

Dr. Sabbagh argued that the stock exchange generated millions of dinars in savings. Others may say that the stock exchange did not create a penny. The function of any stock exchange is to enable players to switch positions. Shareholders replace one another in an already established investment. Companies are created in the primary market where new shares are floated, not in the secondary market where old shares are traded.

In his enthusiasm, the director general of the stock exchange connected the statistics of turnover in the primary and secondary markets of shares to the statistics of capital formation as reflected in the national accounts, implying that trading in shares is the source to finance capital formation.

In contrast, when the floatation of new shares declined to zero in certain recent years, the capital formation was not affected. This negates any direct relation between the two indicators. If we take 1985 as an example, we find that new floated shares were almost zero, while capital formation in Jordan reached JD 427 million. If the impact of the primary share market was so weak or negligible, what about the secondary share market, which has no bearing what so ever?

Capital formation in Jordan in a typical year consists of 65 per cent of construction such as houses, offices, roads, bridges, and dams. 20 per cent of transport means such as vehicles and airplanes, and 15 per cent machinery and other equipment. We cannot see the relations of all of these to the share trading and financial markets, except in as much as new shares are issued to finance new buildings and machinery.

In his lecture, Dr. Sabbagh caused several misunderstandings. He thought that the big bang in London referred to breaking records in huge volume of trading, while it was simply a technical bang and a mere conversion from the old manual ways to the electronic processing, computers and monitors. He was under the impression that modern sotck exchanges operate around the clock. He, therefore, did not exclude the possibility of operating the Amman stock exchange day and night. To be sure stock exchange houses around the world are always closed at night. They have their own normal business hours. Dr. Sabbagh must have meant that the stock exchange system as a whole, worldwide, is in continuous operation due to the difference in time zones. When the stock exchange in Tokyo is closing at the end of the day the London stock exchange is just starting, and when London is about to close the New York and Chicago markets become active, and so on. This by no means calls for working around the clock in the Amman sorter market. It may mean though that since some dealers around the world are active at any given time, prices and other data should be made available by electronic means, day and night.

The director of Amman stock exchange also asserted that demand was in excess of supply at the Amman stock exchange in the early eighties. At that time, he said, he tried to convince the government to sell its shares so that supply would rise to the level of demand. He also noted that supply became in excess of demand later on, which should have prompted the public funds to buy.

It is quite a mistake on bahalf of the stock exchange management to try to influence demand or supply. It is another mistake to think that demand could be more or less than supply without reference to a certain price level. For instance, the demand on the Refinery share may decline to zero at the price of JD 15 per share. It could increase to infinity if the price is JD 1. Both demand and supply are exactly the same at the going price. Any sudden increase in demand would translate into an increase in the price, which would guarantee the continued equilibrium between supply and demand at a new price level. Demand is not a fixed figure to be described as higher or lower than supply. Demand is a chain of figures that vary with price variation, and can be anything between zero and infinity according to price. There is no demand except with reference to a

We certainly enjoyed Dr. Sabbagh's lecture. We do appreciate his enthusiasm, which led him to see everything through the trading hall of the stock exchange.

Misguided fear is Israel's fundamental enemy

By Mohammad Kamal

The writer is Jordan's ambassador to the U.S. The following article is scheduled to appear in today's Washington Post.

MY past two years of residence in the United States have convinced me that the American Jewish community can make a great contribution to achieving a just and lasting peace in the Middle East. I have met and spoken to many prominent American Jews, whose dedication to justice and peace has so impressed me that I have been moved to deliver the message contained in this article.

I believe that the American Jewish community, backed by the great power of American national support, can provide Israel with the reassurance that it apparently needs to make a real move towards peace. It is through this combination of the American Jewish community and U.S. government backing that Israel developed into the major regional power it is today. And it is only by the determined application of the American Jewish community's influence and U.S. government support that Israel will realise that its real security lies not in an isolated existence but in peaceful co-existence with its phbours in the regi

I believe the American Jewish community and the United States hold the power of persuasion required to move Israel towards peace. The tremendous concern both have shown — in wealth, energy and political weight throughout four decades of support to Israel — will have to be used for the equally vital effort of securing the peace. or else all their past efforts will prove of little value. Otherwise, in the end, all will be losers - Israel. the Arabs, the United States and perhaps the world.

The time is now ripe for Arabs and Jews alike to move toward peace negotiations. I hope that the American Jewish community will encourage both the Reagan administration and the government of Israel to join in an international conference on the Middle East that would set a framework for a just and durable peace agreement between the Arabs and Israel.

Israel cannot continue to be imposed on the region. It must be accepted by the Arabs, and only a just and lasting peace will bring acceptance. There is no other alternative, if Arabs and Jews are to live again in peace and har-mony as they did for so many centuries throughout history.

In practical terms, the prospects for peace depend on the mutual Arab and Israeli recognition of three basic principles: That the occupation of land and hegemony over people by force is inadmissible. - That peace can only be negotiated with the participation of all parties involved in the conflict, including the Palesti-

- That every country in the region, including Israel, must be guaranteed the security of its sovereign existence.

I firmly believe that the American Jewish community can now play a unique and decisive role in reshaping policy, both in the United States and Israel, and become a positive generator of tween Arabs and Israelis. But the American Jewish community can also, if it chooses, prevent the emergence of the mutually receptive political climate needed to bring about a negotiated settlement of the 40year-old Arab-Israeli conflict.

The deep commitment of American Jews to Israel — expressed in their moral, economic and political support to the Jewish state — needs no explanation. How they have been able to enlist an equal commitment from the American people nationwide expressed in almost unquestioned political support and an enormous flow of U.S. economic and military aid to Israel — deserves to be examined. Only then can we see who really holds a key to peace in the Middle East. How have so many doors been

America's interest. Constantly, the American Jewish leadership and its friends remind the American public and government of the "special relationship" that exists between the United States and Israel and how this close alliance serves the vital national interests of both countries. A number of dedicated American Jewish organisations, financed and supported by the American Jewish community, lead a campaign to galvanise public opinion and administration policy into unwavering support of Israel. The pro-Israel lobby's primary arena of action is the U.S. Congress, where they work daily to guarantee American backing of Israel on every level. Their parallel negative concern is to deny American support to any other country perceived as an enemy of Israel, even those countries that have enjoyed long and friendly ties with the United States, such as Saudi Arabia and

The past two years saw several examples of the power of American domestic politics to harm U.S. relations with moderate Arabs and thereby to disrupt the most essential elements used by Israel to strengthen its "special relationship" with the United States has been its steady cultivation of an anti-Arab reflex in the American mind. As a result of pro-Israel efforts, the United States has patently ignored or minimised essential economic and strategic interests which the United States and its Western allies have in the Middle East. In addition to Middle East oil, there is the huge Arab market, which represents billions of dollars annually in Western exports to the region. In contrast, Israel has drained more than $40 billion in aid from the U.S. government

As for Amreica's great concern over Soviet penetration in the Middle East, how can one small country of less than four million people — no matter how great its military might |— be considered of more strategic value than the 200 million Arabs who, in the final analysis, will determine the ideological future of the region? It has long been an article of faith on Capitol Hill that Israel

must be strong to "take the risk for peace" and that it must not be forced "to negotiate from weakness." Do not the same axioms hold true for moderate Arab states? Despite several written pledges that the United States would sell Jordan military equipment for legitimate self-defence able to persuade Congress to prevent approval of such arms sales. Even when King Hussein stated Jordan's readiness to negotiate promptly with Israel in accordance with U.N. Resolution 242, Congress was able to raise the ante and prevent even modest sales of equipment designed only to replace obsolete Jordanian equipment. Yet if Jordan does, in fact, play a critical role in maintaining security and stability on Israel's longest Arab frontier, bow can America justify limiting economic and military aid to less than one per cent of what is provided to Israel? Aid to moderate Arabs may, in fact, be a critical factor in maintaining an environment in which all countries in the region can survive and idential expulsion order in 1983,

It is time for Americans concerned for the good of their country — and especially American Jews who are loyal to the United States but have strong attachments to Israel -- to ask some pertinent questions. How can it benefit the United States to persist in uncritical support of Israel, at the expense of deepening alienation among the Arabs and a diminished economic, political and strategic position in the re-gion? Is this a carefully studied policy or is it perhaps shaped by the all-or-nothing perspective of the pro-Israeli lobby? How does it serve Israel's future to pursue a policy that has sustained conflict and fuelled a detrimental, deadend fortress mentality? Is it not in the vital interests of both the United States and Israel to actively work, instead, for a just and lasting peace settlement to the Israel, a state created 40 years ago through a de facto combination of military action and international consent, repeatedly ex-presses the desire to make peace with the Arabs. It seems to suffer, however, from a fear of peace with the Arabs and persistently acts in opposition to its words — in military adventure and land acquisition. Apparently fearful even to consider the compromises that a viable peace process demands and ever fearful of the future. Israel misguidedly thinks it can assure its security by force and through territorial ex-

Fear, it seems, is Israel's fumdamental enemy. Is it that Israelis - and Jews all over the world in their profound commitment to Israel - are still reacting so strongly to the memory of holocausts past that they have become blinded and fail to see the healing promise of a fear-free life that an Arab-Israeli peace would hold? And how is it that Jews who have suffered so much should be so oblivious to the suffering of those displaced in the foundation and subsequent expansion of Israel?

Most Arabs understand the human motivation that lay behind the establishment of a national Jewish entity, which has intended to fulfil the centuries-old Jewish yearning for permanent refuge against discrimination and oppression. The creation of the state of Israel in Palestine, however, did not alleviate Jewish fear nor solve the Jewish problem. It simply shifted and concentrated the problem's geographical

As long as Israel refuses to relinquish the West Bank and Gaza, lands it has held under military occupation since 1967 as long as it refuses to recognise the legitimate rights of the 1.3 million Palestinians who live under its oppression and the millions of others living in diaspora around the world - it will find no peace or security. Preoccupation with security based on military might and the acquisition of land will never assure Israel's future. Only the restoration of Palestimian rights in a land of their own will bring the just and lasting peace needed to release Israel from its fortress of fear and guarantee it permanent security.

The world has witnessed - and we who live in the region have experienced — the terrible consequences of a prolonged, unresolved conflict. We are all ----Arabs and Israelis alike — living precariously in the eye of a deadly unleash its indiscriminate fury upon the region and the world. As the forces of radicalism, religious intolerance and fundamentalism gain strength and the cycle of violence expands, our chances for peace proportionately diminish. The need for peace is urgent. We can no longer allow ourselves to drift along the disastrous tide of inaction.

I believe that most of us, Jews and Arabs, sincerely want peace, but we will have to work for it. On both sides, there are wise and responsible people of good will who can make the difference in defeating the forces of fear and negativism that have hampered past efforts, but they will need voices of leadership that will be needed, in Israel, in America and in the Arab World.

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Lebanese President Amin Gemayel meets special envoys and diplomats, travels abroad as Lebanon's representative and fulfills all the protocol of his post. His pictures adorn the walls of almost every government office.

But Gemayel doesn't rule Lebanon. A score of rival militias and armies vie for power with the president. Prime Minister Rashid Karami and other pro-Syrian Muslim leaders keep at arm's length from Gemayel, a Maronite Christian. Karami has spoken to him only once since December 1985, effectively crippling the government.

Yet Gemayel exerts influence in internal politics and external relations, including efforts to win aid for Lebanon from abroad. Opponents and supporters, both Muslims and Christians, take his views into consideration. His endorsement has proved essential for successful political deals.

Yet his accomplishments come only with the greatest of effort. An aide once told a briefing at the presidential palace that Gemayel, who has given no recent press conferences, "has the most difficult job in the world." Gemayel does not command any of the major feuding factions in Lebanon's 12-year-old civil war, not even among the politically dominant Maronites, who make up one-fourth of Lebanon's population of 4 million. He has only the qualified loyalty of half the national army.

Gemayel's foes repeatedly have bombarded his palace in the Christian suburb of Baabda and his hometown mountain village of Bikfaya with rockets and artillery. He was the target of an assassination attempt by follow-ers of Christian hardliner Elie Hobeika. He has the support, however, of Sunni Muslim Grand Mufti Sheikh Hassan Khaled and Christian spiritual leaders, who regard him as a symbol of what remains of legitimate state authority and unity in Lebanon.

Current negotiations with Syria underline the perception that he is a necessary factor in Lebanon. The talks began after a year-long military and political campaign by pro-Syrian leftists and Muslims ailed to oust Gemayel.

Last year, Gemayel demonstrated his influence when he torpedoed a Damascus-brokered power-sharing accord signed by rival militia chieftains because they did not consult with him. Samir Geagea, as commander of Lebanese Forces, the largest Christian militia, may be the most powerful Christian leader. In an interview, the staunchly anti-Syrian Geagea said Gemayel is "coordinating" with all Christian leaders. But he said the current negotiations with Syria by a Gemayel-picked team were doomed to failure.

George Saade, leader of the right-wing Falange Party, a powerful Christian political force, says the party supports the presi-

Gemayel was unanimously elected by the parliament's Muslim and Christian deputies in 1982, succeeding the assassinated president-elect Bashir Gemayel, his younger brother. He has two years remaining in his non-renewable six-year term.

His term started with trouble. When Gemayel took office in September 1982, the area around Baabda was occupied by invading Israeli troops who had captured one-third of Lebanon.

Gemayel said he had to ask

U.S. special envoy Philip Habib to intercede with Israel to remove a checkpoint the Israeli army had established on the road to his Besieged Muslim west Beirut was then under the control of Palestinian fighters, while Syria maintained troops in northern and eastern Lebanon. The Lebanese army was fractured and civil war was in its 7th year.

Gemayel negotiated a U.S.sponsored agreement for the withdrawal of Israeli troops from Lebanon in 1983, but later reneged on the accord under pressure from Syria. In 1985, Hobeika and Geagea staged an uprising in the Lebanese Forces Christian militia. Gemayel's loyalists were ousted from the force and from the Falange Party.

When Syria, the main power broker in Lebanon, sidestepped him and talked Hobeika into became president, Gemayel was signing an accord with Muslims, suburbs of Beirut, to fly out of

And his administration remains decision-making.

Gemayel still has the qualified under constant criticism. In recent days, Karami, a Sunloyalty of the Christian half of the Gemayel's spokesmen retort that the political reforms demanded by Muslims threaten the Christians' survival.

Commuters work while travelling in office on rails

By Karin Strand The Associated Press

VASTERAS, Sweden - It used to take Ann Larsson 90 minutes to get to work from Stockholm's central station. Now the commute is just as long, but work starts once she is on the train.

Ms. Larsson boards a luxury rail coach belonging to her company, sits at a desk equipped with computer terminals and radiotelephone lines, and gets a head start in the office on rails.

Four months ago, ASEA, a heavy engineering firm, intro-duced its private $600,000 coach on the 65-mile run from Stockholm to the company's headquarters in Vasteras.

For some 20 ASEA executives it means an extra hour's sleep. It allows them to count commuting time as working hours.

Ms. Larsson, who works in section, thought of the office shuttle. Management jumped at the idea. In addition to allowing ASEA executives to get an early start, it has helped recruit topflight newcomers, who dreaded the commute but did not want to move from Stockholm to Vas-

In the office train, Ms. Liursson unpacks notes and a calculator and places them on a birclawood desk. She lights a black reading lamp, glances at the snow / landscape outside the window and starts the day's work as the train leaves the station.

"Most important to me is the fact that I don't have to drive a car any more," she says. "When I used to come to work early on winter mornings, after an hour and a half of driving on dark and slippery roads I was dead tired." Viktor Johansson beards the Ms. Larsson, who works in train in Kungsangen, a suburb ASEA's business development west of Stockholm, and plugs in his personal computer. The office train is ideal for other commuters reluctant to leave family, friends, and the big-city hum of Stockholm, Sweden's capital with a 1.5 miltion population.

"I have my girlfriend and her family in Stockholm," said David Hicks, an engineer from New Zealand. "I get a lot of things done during this trip, and I don't get disturbed too much."

The mobile office, the first private coach allowed on the state-owned Swedish railway, has a lounge with sofas and potted switchboard, buy and brew coffee and tea, clean the carriage and make sure everything runs smoothly.

"It is always nice to be first with a thing like this," said Sven-Olof Welin, who is to evaluate the project for ASEA. "This coach ans a lot to our commuters, but it is also of high public relations value to us.

Welin said travelling office also is secure against industrial espionage, "which is more common than one tends to believe.'

"You can see businessmen and industrialists sitting in ordinary coaches discussing money, projects and technical details and anyone could listen. Our coach is as private as any ASEA office,"

"I bet that within 10 years 100 coaches like this one will be operating Swedish rails."

CHI CAGO - "The dust from space to do this, after years of the Meese Commission has settled and it has settled in our fave ur."

Christie Hefner, daughter of Flugh, founder, president and chies operating officer of Playboy Enterprises Inc, could be forgive:n a wry grin at the way things hav e worked out since Attorney Ge neral Edwin Meese's pornography commission sent its nov v celebrated letter to retailers of Playboy magazine and other adult titles last February.

The letter, which gave a warning to its recipients that they had bee n accused of being involved in "the sale or distribution of pornot graphy," led several, including Southland Corp's 4,500-strong 7-Eleven convenience store chain, to drop the magazine. Five months later, it was a major factor in Playboy's decision to lower its advertiser rate base by 17 per cent to 3.4 million, effective from the November 1986

The impact of the Meese debache on the magazine's advertising ar id circulation, coupled with the spring closure of the three rem aining company-owned Playboy clubs and the $62.2 million net lo ss which the company incurred in its year ended June 30, prompte:d the vultures to start circling. "Playboy — the party's over p roclaimed Newsweek magazine a't the time.

But the commission has since b een prevailed upon to climb d own from some of its loftier p ronouncements. Not only was a court order obtained which d irected it to rescind and repudiat the initial letter; Playboy has si nce filed a suit for unspecified d amages. But following widesy pread criticism of a subsequent resport citing a "casual relationship" between pornography as ad violence, the commission felt n loved to clarify its stance, saying it was referring only to hard-core m aterial.

Today, by a deft sleight of h and, Hefner is actually exploitit ig this criticism of the commissi on for bracketing Plaboy with it's litany of pornographic evils to re-position the company firmly at arm's-length from the struggling

X:-rated industry. She has earned the breathing

The licensing division, also established by Hefner in 1982, switched long ago from the novel-ty items on which the universallyrecognised rabbit and bow tie logo used typically to appear, to a broader-based fashion/merchandise mix.

"It really speaks for the asset value of the logo," says Hefner. "It is a very high-margin busi-

The division's origins date from 1953, when a mail-order business was set up to sell products calculated to boost sales of the fledgling magazine. The product range began to broaden in the 1960s when sales started in the then thriving Playboy clubs.

Licensees were recruited in the mid-1970s when it was realised that it could not distribute sales itself or continue to rely on mailorder sales alone, the preferred shopping method of only a minority of consumers. It has now extended its roster to 58 licensees which manufacture and market apparel, including jeans, swim-suits, sportwear and underwear, as well as other items, such as luggage and bedlinen, around the

The major criterion in assessing the desirability of new licensing agreements is the quality of the product which will bear the logo. The company has benefited, in Hefner's view, "from cancelling some licensing arrangements." In spite of this fastidiousness the business looks well set for further growth, both domestically and overseas. "As of last year, we sell more underwear than Calvin Klein," Hefner says. "I get a kick out of that." While the company recognises that the U.S. industry is somewhat oversaturated, it feels that its market niche at the centre of the mass market arena - most products are targeted at adults aged 18-34 and outlets selling them include Sears, J.C. Penney and Montgomery Ward — together with its household name and its The company says that the reputation for quality, will permit

Most expect the dual spearhead formed by the licensing and into the video medium. Others video divisions to spur the company to operational profitablity in the near future, even if the latter is still held back by persistent problems with the Playboy Cable TV channel. The company has never really succeeded in concocting a product mix which appeals to a wide enough range of viewers. While it is attempting to get closer to its audience by taking the marketing function inhouse and starting to produce a monthly programme guide, a convincing improvement has yet to be achieved. As it is, the company was marginally profitable at the net level in each of its first two fiscal 1987 quarters, thanks to various items of non-operating income including the sale of the lossmaking "Games" magazine. However, analysts generally assume that the sluggish publishing division will continue to put a brake on the recovery. Although Playboy remains America's best-selling men's magazine, circulation has slid steadily from a peak 7.2 million in 1972. Of more immediate concern is the precipitous decline in advertising.

Hefner says that Playboy is addressing the problem by reshuffling management and stepping up the number of regional issues - move facilitated by the magazine's switch to a more flexible binding process last October. As a result, some advertisers are returning to the fold, such as Japanese consumer electronics manufacturers. Hefner says the April 1987 issue will be the biggest in ad pages since December 1985.

If the share price is a fair reflection, Hefner's strategy has certainly put Playboy in recovery mode. In one recent week, it shot up no less than 29 per cent, fuelling inevitable speculation that the magazine's founder. chairman and majority shareholder, Hugh Hefner, ostensibly out to grass writing his autobiography in the company's California mansion, might be plotting to take the company private.

Analysts, however, discount this possibility, pointing to "prohibitively adverse tax consecuences" if Hefner were to mount a leveraged buyout. — Financial

Brazilians turn to mob justice

By Sergio Leitao

Brazilian town of Itamaraju recently, a 300-strong mob formed a road block, seized two murder suspects from their police escort, and beat them to death.

The killing of the two men, said to have stabbed a taxi driver and escaped in his car, was one of 21 lynchings in the northeastern state of Bahia in recent months.

Similar incidents have taken place in other areas, as Brazilians, fed up with the crime that has wracked their country and seemingly losing faith in law enforcement authorities, turn to

. In Bahia, sometimes rallying to cries of "stop thief," mobs have used everything from blows, kicks, stones, iron bars and firearms to kill or wound suspected criminals.

Police, themselves under criticism on charges of being triggerhappy, have had to intervene numerous times, trying to save victims from the wrath of a surging throng.

Sociologists say the problem stems from an understaffed and deficient police force in working class suburbs, and from a lack of public confidence in the workings of justice. Official figures showed that the homicide rate in Brazil rose 40 per cent in five years, from 9.6 per 100,000 people in 1976, to 13.6 per 100,000 in 1983. Frustration with the police and the criminal justice system, said

Rio de Janeiro sociologist Jodag Paranhos, "leads people to resort to the law of the jungle." Bahia State Governor Waldir Pires in a recent te levision interview similarly blanned the lynchings on the public 's lack of faith in the workings of the law. Some of the lynchings resemble the cruellest of blo od sports, and the aims of at least some vigilantes seem to be something less than pure but rough justice. "The present Outbreak is an explosion of anger, by the population which has lost confidence in the authorities," said Bishop Adriano Hipolito of Nova Iguacu, a rio de Janeiro suburb

Egypt crushes Tanzania

CAIRO (R) — Egypt crushed But it did not come until the na d-u fridav m a second round, second-leg soccer match to qualify for the finals of the African Games in Kenya in August by a 10-2 aggregate.

The Egyptians, who defeated the Tanzanians 4-2 in the away match two weeks ago, went on the attack from the start against their inexperienced opponents but were too hasty and missed several good chances.

Gamal Abdul Hamid headed home the first goal in the 18th minute and the Egyptians, who clearly outclassed Tanzanía, pressed hard for a second.

rdi Abdul Ghani, who had hit the bar with a strong shot minutes after Abdul Hamid's goal, finally scored. Three minutes later, the referee awarded Egypt a penalty and Imad Suleiman added a third from the spot. Egypt made a faster and better organised start to the second half and midfielder Ayman Younes put his name on the scoresheet in the 53rd minute. Abdul Hamid added the fifth three minutes later with his second header and Suleiman made it six in the 61st minute.

S. Korea announces new policy to expand imports

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — of the growing surpluses is "the The government announced a most important policy task for new policy Friday aimed at easing trade frictions with foreign countries and seeking balanced economic growth at home.

Deputy Prime Minister Kim Mahn-Je said measures will be taken to expand imports of capital goods, equipment and raw materials and to accelerate the opening of the country's markets by removing non-tariffs barriers.

He also said export credits and other export incentives will be reduced, and exports will be restrained to such areas as the United States and diversified to other regions such as Asia and the Middle East.

Korea is faced with strong pressure, particularly from Washington, to open its markets wider and let its currency, the won, rise substantially to help reduce the trade surplus with the United States.

Mr. Kim, concurrently economic planning minister, reiterated that the Korean currency will be adjusted gradually in accordance with changes in the value of major trading currencies.

He declined to say how much the won would be strengthened. The newspaper Dong-A libo said the government plans to let the won rise 10 per cent against the dollar this year. So far this year, it has appreciated 2.5 per Under the new policy, Mr. Kim said, the economy will be managed to hold economic growth down to eight per cent and the current account surplus to $5 billion for this year, as originally planned.

The minister said the Korean economy, which grew 12.5 per cent last year with a $4.6 billion current account surplus on the strength of the country's first trade surplus ever, continues to show "robust growth" this year, with prices remaining stable.

Mr. Koo Bong-Yung, a top aide to Mr. Kim, said the goverment believes the growing surplus would produce undersirable structural problems with investment "biased toward the export sector, obstructing balanced growth of the national economy.

He said increased money supply from the growing current account surplus also would "increase inflationary pressures."

U.S. expects no Japan retaliation on sanctions

SANTA BARBARA (R) — U.S. trade representative, Mr. Clayton Yeutter, has said he did not expect Japan to retaliate against 100 per cent tariffs imposed by President Reagan on some imports from Japan.

"I would say that it's 99-plus per cent sure that it (Reagan's action) will not provoke a retaliation on American products. Japan has far too much at stake in this relationship to seriously entertain thoughts of retaliation," he told a television interviewer. President Reagan slapped the tariffs on imports worth $300 million retaliation for Japan's alleged failure to abide by an agreement last September to stop dumping Japanese computer microchips on world markets at below cost and to open its market to U.S. semiconductors.

It was the first action of its kind aginst Japan since World War II. The Japanese embassy in Washington said Japan was deeply disappointed at the action. denied the U.S. charges and said Tokyo would complain to GATT, the world trade body.

In Tokyo, government and industry leaders said they regretted the move but did not expect the sanctions to lead to a trade war. Minister of international trade and industry, Mr. Hajime

Tamura, said Japan would not take any immediate retaliatory move and believed the problem could be solved through discus-

Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone said Japan would try to end the retaliatory measures as soon as possible through its appeal to the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT).

The tariffs were imposed on certian computers, colour television sets and power tools, chosen to minimise the impact on American consumers and businesses. The imports are a tiny fraction of the $85 billion yearly Japanese exports to the United States and correspond to the estimated amount of business lost by the U.S. microchip industry because of the alleged Japanese trade practices.

The health and vitality of the U.S. semiconductor industry are essential to America's future competitiveness," President Reagan said in a statement issued mountaintop ranch near here. reasonable period of time."

White House spokesman, Mr. Martin Fitzwater, said the sanctions showed the United States was willing to act on trade issues when it had the evidence.

But he added, "we do not want a trade war or to precipitate anything that would even come close to that.

He said the action also contained a message for Congress which is considering a trade bill including provisions to force the president to take action in certain unfair trade cases. The administration opposes these provisions.

The congressional action is being taken at a time of alarm at America's growing trade deficit, which amounted to $169.8 billion worldwide in 1986. Japan accounts for one-third of the U.S. trade imbalance.

Mr. Fitzwater said the sanctions would be lifted when the government determined there was firm and continuing evidence that Japan was meeting the goals of last September's agreement. He said the evidence would have to be "clear, continuing and unambiguous" and show that while he was on holiday at his compliance had existed "over a

Reagan backs central bank policy

SANTA BARBARA, California (R) — The White House said Friday it agreed with the U.S. central bank's current monetary policies, dissociating itself from remarks by President Reagan's budget chief. The administration feels that the current course of monetary policy is appropriate," presidential spokesman, Mr. Marlin Fitzwater said. He said the administration did not endorse comments on Thursday by White House Budget Director James Millers, who said he was concerned the Federal Reserve, the U.S. central bank, might overreact to the decline of the dollar by raising rates.

Mr. Miller told reporters he was concerned that the Federal Reserve (Fed) might react to signals of rising inflation by tightening credit — a move he said could cause a recession next year and have political consequences.

Mr. Miller's remarks were seen as aimed at discouraging the Fed from tightening credit, which lead to an increase in the federal budget deficit due to lower tax revenues.

His remark about political consequences appeared to refer to the effect a recession could have on presidential and congressional elections next year.

Mr. Fitzwater said Mr. Miller was speaking personally and not for the administration. He said the administration's oft-stated desire (is) that the Federal Reserve conduct monetary policy in such a way as to sustain economic growth without a resurgence of the high inflation and high interest rates that the took office." He also said President Reagan felt the economy was sound and on a stable course.

Mr. Miller's remarks Thursday reflected concern — known to be shared by some other administration officials - that the Fed might feel compelled to tighten credit as a means of shoring up

Higher U.S. interest rates could be expected to make U.S. investments more attractive to foreigners, who would have to convert their currencies into dollars in order to buy U.S. securities or make other dollar-denominated investments.

In New York meanwhile, the dollar closed slightly higher Friday in thin trading restricted by the Easter holidays, as the market virtually ignored the White House's announcement that it imposed 100 per cent tariffs on some Japanese electronic goods, dealers said.

president inherited when he first 1.8130 West German marks from 1.81 marks on Thursday.

> The market was virtually closed by lunch time, and dealers said dealings will probably be quiet until Tuesday when European delaers will be back at their desks. Currency markets in Europe were officially closed for the holidays, as were certain government-regulated markets in the United States such as the bond market and the stock exchanges.

In response to the retaliatory tariff announcement, the dollar was marked down to 142.85 yen but it quickly recovered because the U.S. move had been expected.

"You have to wait until Monday to see a market reaction, if there is any," a Japanese bank dealer said. He said the market might sell the yen initially as the doubled tariffs would hit some Japanese industries hard.

Another Japanese bank dealer said he was watching for possible political developments over the weekend to ease the trade ten-Japanese yen from 143 yen at the sions between the United States previous close, and inched up to and Japan.

Filipino troops crush mutiny

1 mutineer killed, 2 hostages hurt during revolt

MANILA (R) — One mutineer was killed and two hostages wounded Saturday as forces loyal to President Corazon Aquino crushed an eight-hour revolt by a small group of renegade soldiers.

Fidel Ramos told reporters at a of Fort Bonifacio. news conference that former sergeant Toto De Guzman, one of the mutineers, died during the brief uprising at Fort Bonifacio army headquarters which shattered the Easter weekend calm. He said the mutiny was led by another ex-sergeant, Ernesto Librado, a "dishonourably discharged" member of deposed President Ferdinand Marcos's bodygaurd. He had been missing since February 1986 when Marcos was toppled from power. "The president is safe at her residence near Malacanang (the presidential palace)," a statement from Mrs. Aquino's press office

The statement said the rebels entered a military police stockade inside the camp and tried to free 102 soldiers held prisoner there in connection with a Jan. 27 coup attempt. It said only 42 of the detained soldiers, as well as nine military policemen guarding them, joined the group.

Gen. Ramos said that when the rebels found the camp's gate blocked they raided an armoury, seizing about 10 guns, and then occupied the main headquarters building after taking about 20 hostages, including four colonels, navy Capt. Isidro Codera and some civilian janitors.

He did not give further details. Gen. Ramos said an assault of the building was ordered "with instructions that there must be minimum number of casualties." Defence Minister Rafael Ileto said there were unverified reports of coup plot by about 1,000 lowjevel soldiers.

Gen. Ramos said the military was still trying to determine whether the latest mutiny was an isolated incident or part of a fresh

Soviets publish Pasternak letters

MOSCOW (R) - Nine letters by Russian author Boris Pasternak, describing how he wrote his famous novel Dr. Zhivago, are published in the latest edition of the official Soviet weekly Ogonyok. The novel itself is to be published in the Soviet Union next year, more than 30 years after it was completed and printed in the West. The letters are addressed to Pasternak's cousin, Olga Freidenberg, who was a professor of ancient literature at Leningrad University. They describe his feelings about the book - a love story set against the background of the 1917 Bolshevik Revolution - which Soviet authorities denounced as anti-Soviet when it was first published in Italy in 1957. Pasternak was awarded the Nobel Prize for literature in 1958 but was forced to turn it down and died in official disgrace in 1960. However, like other suppressed writers profiting from a cultural thaw, Pasternak is now increasingly being recognised in his homeland, where he is still best known as a poet. Dr. Zhivago will appear in 1988 in instalments in the literary journal Novy Mir, which considered publishing it in 1956 but turned it down on the advice of influential writers," according to Soviet News Agency TASS.

Missing ferry found after week adrift

SYDNEY (R) — An Australian Air Force patrol has found a ferry boat, missing for more than a week off Papua New Guinea with 20 people aboard including two pregnant women. Search organisers said the passengers of the 10 metre ferry had lived on copra (dried cocond), were suffering from dehydration and had sent incoherent radio messages. The aircraft dropped medical supplies and signalling gear to the MV Matima and a rescue boat was on its way to the Bismarck Archipelago north west of the capital Port Moresby. The Matima went missing on April 10 after running out of fuel near Tabar on New Ireland.

Flies imitate spiders for survival

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some types of flies have learned to mimic aggressive spiders in order to avoid attacks by other spiders, researchers say. Several species of fruit flies appear to have taken a sheep-in-wolf's clothing approach to staying alive, a kind of predator mimicry rarely seen in nature, researchers said. Two research groups working separately have documented the defensive behaviour of tephritid fruit flies in avoiding capture by their major nemesis, jumping spiders. The flies have a banding pattern on their wings resembling that of spider legs and false eyespots on the end of the abdomen. When threatened, the flies extend the wings and do a side-to-side dance, similar in appearance to the gait of a jumping spider, the scientists found. In reports published in the April 17 issue of the Journal Science, the groups said there are many examples of predators mimicking prey to aid in capture. Also, some animals copy colour patterns to avoid detection and some adopt the more aggressive appearance of other animals. "However, the case in which prey mimic their predators to avoid predation is rarely reported," wrote Monica Mather and Bernard Roitberg of Simon Fraser University in Burnaby, British Columbia, Canada, in one of the reports. \(\cap{2}\)

Lawyers for both groups drew up contracts that all the winners sig wealth. Each of the school people will get about $13,000 a year for 26 years after taxes are withheld while each of the warehouse workers get $20,000 a year. PEKING (AP) — China's juvenile crime rate is causing public concern, although it is still much lower than that of Western countries, an official was quoted as saying. Sixty to 70 per cent of all criminal cases in China involve juvenile delinquents, compared with 20-30 per cent in the early 1960s, the official Xinhua News Agency quoted Zhang Liqun, chairman of the Chinese Society for Juvenile Delinquency Research, as saying. The age of juvenile delinquents has become lower in recent years, and the crimes have become more serious, Zhang said. "In the 1950s and 1960s, youngsters usually committed crimes at the age of 16, but now they start from 11," he said. Juvenile delinquents used to be involved mainly in petty theft and hooliganism but now are involved in murder, robbery, rape and other serious crimes, Zhang said. He said juvenile delinquency dropped after a crackdown on serious crimes began in 1983, but did not give any details.

Amy Carter not guilty in protest case

NORTHAMPTON, Mass. (R) - Former President Jimmy Carter's daughter Amy was acquitted of trespassing and other charges arising from a demonstration against the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA). Carter, a 19-year-old Brown University student, told reporters after the verdict that "the jury found the CIA guilty of violating greater laws than trespassing." Carter, acquitted along with 13 co-defendants, was tried on charges arising from a protest last November at the University of Massachusetts against CIA recruitment there. The defendants chose to use their arrests as an opportunity to attack the CIA in court and used a legal doctrine known as the "necessity defence," arguing they broke a lesser law to stop the CIA from violating more serious laws. When the jury read the first not-guilty verdicts, the packed court room burst into applause. Carter said her father telephoned to tell her he was proud of what she was doing. During the four-day trial, the defence team called a stream of expert witnesses to testify to allegedly illegal activities of the CIA, among them former Attorney General Ramsey Clark, who served under President Lyndon Johnson.

Man gets 150 years in Duffy killing

BOULDER, Montana (R) - A 19-year-old Montana man has been sentenced to 150 years in prison for the shotgun slaying of the parents of Patrick Duffy, the star of the television series Dallas. Kenneth Miller, was convicted in March for the November 1986 murders of Terrence and Maria Duffy, who owned a bar in this small ranching and mining community of 1,800 people. A second man, Sean Wentz, also 19, has been charged in the double slaying. He is scheduled to go on trial on May 1 but his attorney has said he may enter a plea for him. The Duffys had pictures behind the bar of their son Patrick, who plays Bobby Ewing in the popular TV series Dallas, on the night they were gunned to death in the small, quiet tavern they operated in Boulder, about 48 kilometres outside the state capital, Helena.

In India, hundreds of cubic centimetres of contaminated cooling water spilled from the Tarapur plant into surrounding farmfields after a six-year-old rubber seal ripped, Der Spiegel said. Large amounts of topsoil had to be removed and des-

The Jaslovske Bohunice nuclear reactor in Czechoslovakia suffered four mishaps in 1984 alone, Der Spiegel said, mainly because of operator incompetence and slipshod repairs.

The magazine also reported "hushed-up" mishaps at several U.S. nuclear reactors in 1985, including the Catawba and Brunswick plants in North Carolina, the Fermi plant in Michigan, Cooper in Nebraska, Beaver Valley in Pennsylvania and Dresden

The U.S. accidents were traced to operating mistakes or construction error, the magazine said. It did not say whether those mishaps led to any radiation
